

New News for November 6th, 2007

Now Playing: Almost Easy by Avenged Sevenfold

Mood: Good, Excited for Weekend

Welcome back friends and such. Today was kinda rough. I was at work but I wasn't reallt "at work". I am finding that there are too many plates a spin'n and something is bound to crash. Well I got my wife's work site back up and presentable. Go to www.stanthonyspoint.com if you want to check that out. I think it is nice but I am not sure I like the font yet. It is weird. Check out this new Avenged Sevenfold song! It rocks out and is melodic and hookie. Gotta dig that.

In other news, my wife, father in law and sister in law went to see Bruce Springsteen on Sunday night. Wow was that ever a good show! My father in law is the biggest Springsteen fan there is. I hate to hear people putting the show down because "they didn't play all their old songs". Well, guess what, the E Street Band and Bruce just put out a NEW album and that is the way it is. I don't understand why people insist that artists stay trapped in the past playing their old stuff. They played some old and great stuff as well as some new and "medium newness" stuff. Anyway, fabulous show. I very much dug.

Alex went trick or treating for the first time on this past Halloween! What a good time that was. My son amazes me. Everybody loved him and he was so happy for all 3 hours we went (we cheated and went in Howland and Niles LOL). Nikki and Leo and their girls came too and it was really just great. How he is growing. I picked him up from his daycare the other day and asked him to wave goodbye to the women that watched him. What does he do? He blows them all a kiss! I showed him "wave" and told him "wave" and he blew kisses instead! He is doing his own thing and making his own connections. That is crazy cool for a parent to see. Love him. Anyway, that is all that is on my mind for now really so have a good one all!

Till next time,

Ryan

If you haven't read Descent of Angels go get it today.

New News for October 8th, 2007

Now Playing: First Time by Lifehouse

Mood: Creative (but way too busy at work)

I would not say that I am bored at work today. Oh no, I would definitely not say that. Between my 9-5 (8-3, truth be known) and my side gigs, I don't know whether I am coming or going all the time. So why then am I here working on this page? Well, to be honest, I have some serious work to do on another site for a business and I am sharpening my html axe on my own page. I was kinda ashamed and now that things are at least tolerable at work, I can dig in a little. This page was created using Adobe Photoshop and its Slice tool. This was new to me but it is how all the cooler and more modern looking sites are being done (and have been for some time). All the graphics are home made and the code was written raw. I like it raw. LOL. The last thing to comment on would be the CSS I wrote for the site. It is basic, I know, but the point is that I made it and I am proud of it. Now I just gotta get some tunes up on this piece.

Till next time,

Ryan

If you haven't seen Knocked Up go rent it today.

Old News (July 6th, 2007)

NOW PLAYING: The Enemy by Godsmack

MOOD: Good (Bored at Work)

Yes, I am bored at work. So why not update the webpage? Now that I am in here, what is there to say really? I will start with a shameless (but well deserved) plug for the Transformers movie. SURE it is a part of my childhood nostalgia and, of course, I HAD TO go see it. I was really building it up to be another "The Hulk". Lots of hype and an awful movie. I have to say that I was pleasantly SHOCKED. It was a really good movie. Action folks will dig it and it had a decent storyline. Granted, it would be very tough to jam all they wanted to do into it but it is very open for good sequels. Go check it out. You will be surprised. Ok, Transformers: Good. My next topic (one sure to bring me to financial and marital problems) is PAINTBALL. I have never paintballed before and, when asked if I wanted to go, I was intrigued. I had heard that "it hurts" and that "it doesn't hurt" and I will say the answer to that is "yes". When hit by a marble going 300 feet-per-second it stinks (hurts) for like a split second and then it leaves a small mark that will be sore if you mess with it. Ok, that said, I really dug paintball. I am looking into getting my own gear (easy at first as the stuff is pricey) and getting into it more. Hunting men is mad fun (kinda sicka dn scary huh?). We went to Encounters in Hermitage, PA and played for like 6 hours. The next three days I was SO SORE. Not from the paintballs but from squatting all day. I didn't warm up or stretch and my quads were destroyed. LOL. Guess that show me: get it shape or die maggot! Ok, I wore a cup as suggested by my one buddy and I was mocked by another buddy for it. WOuldn't you know the first (FIRST) hit I took was directly to the cup!? Man I was happy to have it. I could not imagine the pain of that one. Some other good hits I took were to the throat, pinky finger and elbow. All in all I took 7 hits and got 3 kills that day which, in my humble opinion, for a beginner was pretty good. I effing nailed this one kid with 5 rounds in the same spot. What can I say, I really wanted to get the hit. Ok, enough rambling about paintball. Fun. Alexander and Kristy are both well. Not much really to report there except for the fact that Alex is now running around like a maniac! He is really good at it now but he wants to climb too and that is not so good. He can climb up stuff but not down...you see where this is going? Yeah, he falls so we don't let him climb down without parental assistance. The fourth of July was cool. He chased his cousin (senior by 2 or 3 months) around all day. I am happy to see that he is where she is and she is older. My son is a genius. Funny, I said "nothing to report" but I can run on and on about Alex. He is getting not so good at going out to eat too. It is not his fault or a bad thing. He just wants to run and if he doesn't want to eat or is full, forget it. He rants. LOL. His rants amuse me. Lastly, pool's in! We have been enjoying the crap outta it. I like the fact that I can float around and get some sun on cooler days and get in and refreshed on hoter days. We put the solar cover on last night so we will see how warm she is today. I will have to get some pix up. I say that shit all the time don't I? LMAO. Someday. Maybe today. I want to send out sincere thanks to my friends and relatives that helped us put in the pool. You guys are the greatest and I couldn't have done it without ya!!!

See you next time! Pirate Work-Slacker King!

~Webmaster Kaos

"If you haven't seen Transformers go see it today!"

Old News (May 5th, 2007)[Cinco de Mayo]

NOW PLAYING: The Enemy by Godsmack

MOOD: Great!

Time to ramble on and on again. Ok, I will try to pull my unorganized and sometimes incoherent thoughts into something entertaining to read. Where to begin, where to begin? Well I could drop some info about our latest family vacation. My wife, my son, my father in-law and sister in-law (and of course me) all went out to San Diego for a week recently. Those of you who now me will be surprised to hear that I did extremely well flying for once. I really hate flying. I am scared to death of it. People say it is because I am out of control of the plane and all (am I a control freak?). Possibly true. The stats are definitely in your favor of flying over driving. You have a 1:7,000,000 chance of actually being in a plane crash (though the chances of you actually DYING in said plane crash are 90% LOL). Well Kristy was the one scared this time (and she is never scared to fly)! She was scared for Alex and all and I assured her with my "we/I/he/she/it could get hit by a bus tomorrow speech". Good husband, huh? We did a ton of great stuff out there like going to Sea World and the world famous San Diego Zoo. The friends of their family that we stayed with were supper nice and had a great home (they are quite well off). California is such an amazing place that Kris and I are seriously considering moving out there! LOL. There has to be a catch or everyone would live out there. What really surprised me was the "traffic". It is not that bad at all really. There is one major interstate (the I-5) that goes north and south and the exits are set up very logically. After a few days I was totally confident in driving out there. Ok, San Diego rules, on to new subject matter. Alex is now a One Year Old! We made it! LOL. We had a big (I mean BIG) party for him at the Activities Building at Buhl Park (not expensive to rent for the whole day). The weather was "ok" and at least it didn't rain. Alex wasn't feeling great but still had an awesome time. A lot of people showed up and everyone loved the food (a combination of Wal-Mart chicken (don't laugh, it effing rules!), Antone's pasta, salad, parsley potatoes, etc. We didn't spend a lot but it sure looked and tasted like we did. So many people showed and we still had tons of food left over. My wife is good for that. We will plan an event and she ALWAYS gets too much food and drink for it. But, we never run out at least so thanks Kris. Thanks also to Jeff for eating like 12 pieces of chicken to "help out with the extra food". Alex is doing do well and is really just the perfect child. We are very blessed with him and being a dad is cool as shizz. Lastly, it is Cinco LAN 2007 so I "should" be getting me computer ready. I need to get some pix updated to this website too. So much to do, so much to do (and I think I hear Alex waking up LOL...such a sweet baby boy).

Well I am out for now mang! Peace.

Mr. Organization
~Webmaster Kaos

"If you haven't seen 300 go see it today!"

Old News (January 15th, 2007)

NOW PLAYING: Bullet with a Name by Nonpoint

MOOD: Tired/Good

So it's 8:30 AM and I am trying to type ever so softly. The baby is still asleep (though I am not). At any time this post may have to be continued. Why on earth did I get up so early on a day with no school? Only I can know that. So much to write about and so little will to do so. LOL. Well I guess we should start with Christmas. It seems like yesterday as well as a year ago. Christmas was just plain awesome! Alex is just to the stage where he is able to sit up by himself (without the fear of falling over LOL). He will sit up now and play toys. We call it "playing toys". It is one of our things. We did the normal stuff for the holiday like visiting all the fam and such (which I have always enjoyed but it is so much better now that we have the baby). Christmas day was mostly at our house and the grandparents all came over in the late morning. It was super. Alex got so much stuff that we could hardly get it all under the tree. I think his favorite toy would be the car dashboard that makes sounds and lights up (and BOY does it make SOUNDS. That was from Santa Claus. In other news we just got back from Camp Fitch. Camp Fitch is a 3 day retreat for the fifth grade class in Erie, PA that I have chaperoned for the past 6 years. It is really a good time and we had a grest (though smaller than normal) group this year. I think I have posted on Camp Fitch before so if you are real curious you can go check out my "Archive" section. Well I am pushing my luck with the baby so I should go and get him up now.

Have a good one.

Big Daddy
~Webmaster Kaos